Happy May from the IT Department!

When a website asks if it can offer you “cookies,” unfortunately, it’s not offering Girl Scout cookies. In the digital world, cookies are small text files that websites store on your device to improve and personalize your browsing experience.

There are two primary types of browser cookies:

First-Party Cookies:

Created by the website you’re visiting, these help the site remember information such as your language preferences, login details, and items in your shopping cart between visits.

Third-Party Cookies:

Created by advertisers or services embedded within a website, these cookies track your activity across different sites for advertising and analytics purposes. This is why you may notice advertisements for products or services you’ve recently viewed elsewhere. While useful for targeted content, third-party cookies can feel intrusive to users.

Managing Your Cookies:

You have the option to delete cookies, block certain types, or adjust how websites use them through your browser settings. Regularly reviewing these settings or disabling third-party cookies can help you maintain your privacy without sacrificing convenience.

To assist you, we’ve included a Scribe guide below with step-by-step instructions on how to adjust your browser settings.

As always, if you have any questions or need assistance, please don’t hesitate to reach out to the IT Helpdesk at ochelpdesk@oconee.ga.us.
